

212 JOURNEYMEN: NEXT LEVEL UBC LEADERS

The UBC's Department of Education and Training's new program, 212 Journeymen: Next Level Leaders, is open only to journeypersons who have completed the UBC Journeymen: Building Leadership for a Strong Future program. The program is specifically designed for journeypersons who exemplify the principles of the UBC Journeymen program by having returned to their jobsites and making a measurable impact or stepping up in a leadership role at the Council level.

Participants will stay at the International Training Center in Las Vegas for four intensive days of training, Thursday through Sunday. The cost of the training, as well as the flight and accommodations, are paid for by the Carpenters International Training Fund. If you accept entry into the program but choose not to attend at the last minute, or are somehow removed from the program, you are required to repay all expenses paid on your behalf.

Criteria for Attendance:

- Attended and successfully completed UBC Journeymen: Building Leadership for a Strong Future program
- Must be a Journeyperson who returned and became more involved with their Local or Council, and/or with their Contractor following their attendance in the UBC Journeymen: Building Leadership for a Strong Future program
- A high average of hours worked per year (1,600 hours, for example)
- Extra consideration given to journeypersons who also attended and completed the Third Year Apprentices Program: Helping Build our Communities
