COLLABORATIVE LEADERSHIP

BUILDING JOBSITE LEADERS

This three-day program offered by the UBC is designed to give jobsite supervisors the tools necessary to improve the overall jobsite, taking it from good to great. This calls for collaborative-based leadership, and the creation of a partnership culture — one that can harness the knowledge and expertise of all stakeholders.

The collaborative leadership approach recognizes that leadership is greatest in a collective team. By encouraging equal participation across all levels, a collaborative leader allows solutions to develop from the best ideas of the group, and takes a team approach to problem-solving.

Who is Eligible?

The Collaborative Leadership program is open to all supervisory personnel on the jobsite, including foremen, general foremen, safety managers, project managers, estimators, superintendents, owners and more. To receive the maximum benefit of this program, it is strongly encouraged that each company sends a minimum of two (2) employees to each session. Participants may nominate themselves, or be recommended for the program by Council Business Representatives or staff. Participants DO NOT need to be union members.
